Know the Signs, Ask the Questions

Community Training on Suicide Screening

Join us for a community training designed to help participants recognize warning signs of suicide risk and feel more confident asking direct, compassionate questions when someone may be struggling.

During this training, participants will learn how to:

- Recognize common warning signs and risk factors.
- Use the Columbia Suicide Severity Rating Scale (CSSR-S).
- Connect individuals with appropriate support and resources.
- Build confidence when having conversations that can make a difference.
- Access harm reduction items such as gun locks, medication lock boxes, medication deactivation kits (Deterra).

Whether you are a community member, educator, caregiver, faith leader, volunteer, or professional, this training is for anyone who wants to be better prepared to recognize the signs and respond.

Be willing to ask. Be ready to listen. Be prepared to help.
